

Quorum Court Appropriations for New Year Are $27,407.50

County Judge Frank Rider Complimented for Operating County Government Within Its Revenue

Appropriations totaling $27,407.50 for the county's expenses during the coming year were voted by the Hempstead County Quorum Court at the annual levying session at the courthouse in Washington Monday.

Twenty-two justices attended the levying meeting called every year for the purpose of fixing taxes and making appropriations for necessary governmental expenses.

On the County Equalization Board there was one change for the new year, Frank Trimble replacing Mark Jackson. With Mr. Trimble are this year's other two members, Stuart Monroe and W. B. Lafferty.

County Judge Frank Rider was complimented by a resolution of the Quorum Court for having operated the county government within its revenues during the year now closing. The resolution follows:

Government Loan 50 Cents a Bushel on 1937 Corn Crop

Details of the Program to Be Announced by Wallace

HAD ASKED 60 CENTS

Governor Bailey Doubts That Cottonseed Will Be Included

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Informed officials of the Agriculture Department said Tuesday that the government would lend 50 cents per bushel on this year's corn crop.

These informants said details of the program would be announced by Secretary Wallace within the next few days.

They said the program would correspond in general to the previous government corn loans. The 50-cent loan will be made on corn sealed on the farm and testing 14 1/2 per cent moisture content, or less.

Farm organizations had asked for a 60-cent loan. Secretary Wallace said that a loan of about 46 cents would correspond to the nine-cent-a-pound loan of the government on this year's cotton crop.

Little Rock—(AP)—Governor Bailey said Tuesday that he doubted that cottonseed would be included in the proposed crop control program of the federal government.

He discussed the South's cottonseed situation with President Roosevelt during a recent eastern trip, and said that the chief executive failed to offer definite encouragement.

Succeeds R. V. Herndon as President of Hope Civic Club

A. W. Stubbeman was elected president of the Hope Kiwanis club at its luncheon meeting Tuesday noon at the cottage of First Christian church, succeeding R. V. Herndon who soon rounds out his term as head of the club.

Stubbeman was elected by a vote of 14 to 12 over Matt Lee in a close-contested race in which "mock" campaign speeches were made by Leo Tauer, manager for Stubbeman, and G. T. Cross, campaign manager for Lee.

C. P. Tolson was elected vice-president of the club, and Olin Lewis as club treasurer.

Board of Directors elected Tuesday are:

Sid Bundy, Joe Floyd, Carl Bruner, Bert Webb, Leo Tauer, Roy Crane and Frank Hill.

A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Herndon, retiring president, following a speech by the Rev. Bert Webb.

Guests of the club were A. B. Worthington, superintendent of Blewett schools, the Rev. V. H. Hammond of Hope, and H. E. Shuenfeldt of Dallas, Texas.

The Rev. Bert Webb, chairman of the Red Cross drive in Hope, announced that the annual campaign for membership would get under way on November 11.

He appealed to members of the club and citizens of Hope for co-operation in making the annual drive a success.

Hunters Cautioned About CCC Crews

Sportsmen Warned There Are 250 Boys Working in Woods

The annual game of hide-and-seek between hunters and their quarry will soon begin. Careful hunters and a few not so careful will be tramping the fields and woods for targets.

There are about 250 CCC boys doing soil conservation work on farms in this vicinity. Red warning signs will be posted in conspicuous points near where crews of the boys are working. When you see one of these signs, find out exactly where the boys are located and then do your hunting in the opposite direction.

These boys are helping you. Among other things, they are planting trees and shrubs so that wildlife will find a more favorable environment next year and in the years to come.

Why not help the boys in your turn? Don't shoot in their direction and don't hunt near where they are working.

Will the League Act Against Japan in World Peace Threat?

10-Million-Dollar Palace in Switzerland Result of Dream by Woodrow Wilson, an American President

An American statesman, Woodrow Wilson, conceived the League of Nations 20 years ago as an instrument for world peace. Now, in the face of a world crisis, American statesmen have approved the League's stand against Japan's invasion of China. Yet this is not the first time the United States and the League have gone along together. Here is an account of their relationship.

(First of a series of three)
By CHARLES NORMAN
AP Feature Service Writer

The $10,000,000 palace of the League of Nations on the slopes overlooking Lake Lemnan near Geneva, Switzerland, is the dream in stone of an American President; and American money ($2,000,000, contributed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.) went into the construction of its magnificent library.

For centuries men had dreamed of an international league to keep the peace of the world. There had been holy leagues, leagues for war and leagues for the promotion of trade. But the idea of a league against war remained an unfulfilled hope.

Born of Bloody War
It could not have been otherwise in ages when despotic power was in the hands of a few monarchs. The American and French Revolutions unleashed forces that made possible a concert of people, but not until after the bloodiest war in history did it take tangible form.

It was President Woodrow Wilson's insistence that made the Covenant of the League of Nations an integral part of the peace treaties that followed the World War. At the councils of the Allies he personified the spirit of idealism that had taken the United States

MAYORS IN 30 CITIES

Winners May Receive Consideration as 1940 Presidential Timber

By the Associated Press
Personalities rather than national issues dominated Tuesday in off-year elections of mayors in more than 30 cities, legislatures in five states, governors in Virginia and New Jersey and for four congressmen to fill vacancies in New York and Virginia.

Detroit's non-partisan election shares attention with New York City's mayoralty battle.

Patrick H. O'Brien, endorsed by a committee of industrial organization, contested Richard W. Reading, supported by the American Federation of Labor, for the Detroit mayor's post.

Some winners in Tuesday's balloting may receive consideration as 1940 presidential timber. Three mentioned especially in this connection are:

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, seeking re-election and backed by Republicans, Laborites, Socialists and Communists.

The second and third are U. S. Senator A. Harry Moore and State Senator Lester H. Clee, contesting for the governorship of New Jersey.

Moore, a Democrat, has been governor twice.

Clee, a Republican, is a Presbyterian minister.

Mr. Reid will answer questions on any feature of the act but will stress the old-age insurance provisions. Rebuild War Targets for Next Conflict

THE great cathedral of Rheims, France, destroyed by German shells during the World war and rebuilt largely through American interests, has been re-constructed.

In magnificent ceremonies, the French Cardinal Suhard rededicated its famous altar, before which the kings of France have knelt to receive their crowns. Blessing its ancient walls, still bearing the scars of war, he returned the cathedral's sacred relics, absent for 23 years.

As age-old chants re-echoed in its medieval, vaulted arches it seemed that there was the triumph of good over evil.

THE World war era is passing; its scars rapidly are being erased. Few of the younger generation can remember the terror of the conflict. There remains, of course, the army of broken men, living spectacles of conflict's havoc, but most of these are segregated in hospitals or other government institutions, real "prisoners of war" awaiting inevitable but delayed release from a stagnant, useless life. To those who escaped unscathed, years have turned battles into a memory of gay adventure.

Huge, imposing memorials, dedicated within the past year, mark the battlefields where thousands died.

"MEMORIALS to lasting peace," they were called as national leaders dedicated them. But does the world need to be reminded of peace?

More effective in curbing growing battle spirit would be memorials to war. The gaunt spectacle of a shell-torn Rheims cathedral is more impressive as a deterrent to war than the handsomely restored edifice.

The spectacle of thousands of crippled American soldiers parading along Fifth Avenue would have far greater effect than the marching of gay American Legionnaires. Let there be war memorials but let them reflect reality—stark monuments to hate and death.

Dogs For Sale

WITH wars, crime, debts and taxes the old world seems a pretty gloomy place until something like the Fredericksburg, Va., dog auction comes along to restore faith in man.

The custom of selling at public auction dogs of all values and breeds, originated in colonial days and has continued to the present time. Many were the tears as owners parted with beloved pets for a few much-needed dollars.

But best news was the reaction of purchasers. Almost without exception they not only returned the pets but allowed the buyers to keep the money from the sale. From a New York broker came an offer by wire, to buy and return the "coon dog" of a lonely hill farmer who parted with his pal for $6 he "just had to have."

This is good news. When the inherent generosity of people refuses to be submerged in a maelstrom of international and domestic difficulties, there is little cause for worry about the future.

Strike Aftermath

IT IS now more than three months since the "little steel" strike of 1937 was broken, and more than four months since it began.

Most people have forgotten it. But there are some 3500 families who have not forgotten.

They are the families of the men, still technically "on strike," who have not gone back to work, and who may never go back. Their places have been filled, production is going forward.

In Cleveland a public meeting has been called to try to relieve their destitution. Youngstown, Pittsburgh, Canton and other cities face a similar problem, for C. I. O. "strike benefits" have dwindled to less than $20 a week.

The problem can not be lightly dismissed by saying "They quit their jobs. Let them starve." For these are American workmen, and they exercised an American right to strike for a principle they believed just.

Public relief will probably have to carry them eventually. Which is just one more reason why a better way must be found than violent strikes to settle labor relations problems. These men and their families, left like driftwood in the wake of industrial strife, are evidence of our failure to solve a problem that must be solved.

Boils, Carbuncles May Cause a Serious Illness Unless Given Proper Treatment

This is the tenth of a series of articles in which Dr. Morris Fishbein discusses diseases of the skin.

(No. 360)

A boil is also an infection of the skin. It usually follows a breaking of the skin such as occurs when the back of the neck is constantly rubbed by a collar which has not been laundered smoothly.

Boils occur particularly on those parts of the skin that are covered by hair follicles since the hair follicles offer increased opportunity for irritation and for the entrance of germs beneath the surface of the skin.

In some diseases, such as diabetes, the skin of the person seems to react unduly to infection and boils occur with greater frequency in diabetes.

It is generally believed that repeated infections of the skin such as pimples and boils result from a generally lowered resistance of the body to disease. Such a lowering may come with increased fatigue and with bad diet, constipation, insufficient sleep or fresh air, and a general deficiency in all of the health habits that are associated with good hygiene.

Persons who have boils frequently should try to keep the body in the best physical state by establishing good health habits. All infections of the ears, teeth, throat, nose or other portions of the body should be attended to since frequently the germs coming from these portions of the body may localize elsewhere and set up secondary infections.

A boil is actually a deep-seated inflammation of the skin. Usually the germs causing the boils are the pus-forming germs which are ever ready to attack when the resistance of the skin is broken down by any continued irritation or other disturbances.

There are innumerable methods for treating boils. Heat is frequently applied because it brings a good supply of blood. The blood aids in destroying germs. The blood also brings to the area where the boil is located the necessary white blood cells which wall off the boil from the rest of the body.

Help Wanted

ENGINEER wishes organize large staff competent men to work on big project. Opportunity for advancement. H.H.

The opening of a boil is a serious surgical operation. Not everyone is competent to do this. The idea that anyone who can see blood without fainting is competent to do minor surgery has long since been exploded by the deaths of people who have been seriously infected generally through careless handling of small infections.

If a boil is opened improperly, the infectious material may spread to other parts of the skin and may even be forced through the wall that separates it from the rest of the body in which case the infection may spread through the system and cause death.

In some instances X-ray and ultraviolet rays have been applied when boils are long persistent. This, however, is a procedure which only a competent physician should attempt. The use of yeast for boils is certainly of no established merit. Vaccines or preparations of the killed germs taken from the boil sometimes seem to help in building up resistance.

A carbuncle is actually a group of boils and is simply more serious because it represents a more extensive infection. When carbuncles occur in aged people or in those who are recovering from illness, they are naturally much more serious than when they occur in the young. Nowadays the X-ray is frequently used in the treatment of carbuncles. In serious cases the attention of an expert surgeon is required.

Inquest Into Two Deaths Is Slated for Thursday

FORREST CITY, Ark.—(AP)—Coroner John Crawford postponed until Thursday an inquest into the deaths of Lon Hamrick, 30, and a negro, George Ferry, in a truck accident Saturday night.

Oron Burns, driver of the truck, remained at liberty under $1000 bond, fixed by the coroner. Hamrick and Ferry fell off a truck seven miles west of here.

Although most lives of Shakespeare consist of two or more volumes, all that is known of him need take up no more than 10 pages.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JILL WENTWORTH, heroine, attractive debutante.
ALAN JEFFREY, hero, rising young man.
BARBARA WENTWORTH, Jill's stepmother.
ALAN WENTWORTH, Jill's brother.
SYLVIA SUTTON, oil heiress.

Yesterday Ardash Holm sets her cap for Alan, after his break with Jill, and arrives unannounced one day at his studio.

CHAPTER XII

"I HOPE I'm not intruding. Perhaps you are busy," Ardash began, humbly enough.

She had long ago realized that humility is a becoming role for a woman dealing with a proud and spirited man.

"I remembered the lovely pictures, and I wanted to see them in a nicer place."

"No," Alan heard himself saying, to his own amazement, in a courteous tone that held none of his previous irritation. "I was painting, but it is nothing that cannot wait."

"Oh, please! I'd love to see a picture in the making. Couldn't I?"

Alan was amazed at her interest. He had not expected artistic enthusiasm from this girl. He had not expected anything. He had scarcely been aware of her those other times.

A tempestuous nature lurked behind the calm, almost expressionless face, he felt sure. She might be none too sharp intellectually, but she was emotionally, Alan realized.

HE would like to put her on canvas. Paint her as a woman who was emotionally asleep, with a slow, sluggish smile on her wide, mobile mouth. A smile that just touched her sleepy eyes. And then paint her again as a woman awakened, with a fierce, possessive light in her eyes, her lips curved for a frown.

Alan had forgotten his prejudice against having a woman, or any stranger, invade his private sanctum, and had led the way back to the studio. He raised the shade from the windowed recess, so that the rich tints of his picture might be revealed to his visitor.

He looked at his portrait; the regal head of a young Russian aristocrat, as he remembered her. "I like it," Ardash said.

Alan warmed to the simple statement. She was ignorant, he knew. Very ignorant about cultural things. But she made no pretense of knowledge, for which he admired her.

"I don't suppose," Ardash spoke abruptly, "that you would care to paint me?"

He did want to paint her. But he was unprepared for her direct question. Paradoxically, he didn't want to paint her. He had a feeling that perhaps contact with this sultry young person might not be especially good for him. At least not especially rewarding artistically.

IT was all very well to visualize her on two canvases. But putting her there—especially in the mood his imagination had evoked, with her full lips parted to reveal gleaming teeth—might be more difficult. Rather than be an inspiration, she might play havoc with it.

"I don't know," Alan temporized. "Have you ever posed for pictures?"

"I'm a model for clothes," Ardash replied. "I pose every day for somebody. I shouldn't think it would be so very different."

"Very different," Alan said. "Posing for clothes doesn't require any mental effort. But when an artist demands a mood—"

"What kind of mood?" Ardash questioned, her eyes on his.

Alan colored. Never mind that. If this girl thought she could force him into confidences, she was mistaken. His thoughts were his own. There had never been a woman yet he would care to share them with.

Yes, there had been one. A beautiful clear-eyed girl, whose clear eyes had masked deceit. The most dreadful of all deceptions. A conspiracy to topple his pride and professional integrity. A conspiracy to make a fool of him.

The thought of Jill, bringing with it again the pain of broken romance and disillusionment, made him feel more tolerant of this girl with her purposes so honestly exposed. Yes, she would probably prove an apt model.

He didn't like her. He distrusted her. But he might paint her.

"I think," drawled Ardash, who had watched indecision playing over his face, and read it wisely, "that I'll leave my address and telephone number. After all, you might need a model, some day. Who knows?"

AFTER she had gone he looked at the small card. Ardash Holm. The name seemed to suit. The address, he told himself, meant nothing to him.

It was just as well to tear it up, this small card that was a tangible temptation of some kind.

But instead, Alan crossed to a desk and dropped the card into a drawer which held some receipts and more unpaid bills.

The next day Alan saw Jill's picture, as he carelessly turned the pages of a newspaper. Jill, he read grudgingly, was having a ball. The date was some time away, but the event was heralded as one of major importance in the winter calendar.

The brilliant ball was one Mrs. Wentworth had had in mind a long while. She wanted it to eclipse any social affair Jill had ever been given and to rank with the elaborate parties of the season.

It would be, Jill thought, with a new cynicism, exactly like a ball label: "Look what the debutante of this season has to offer. And then look at what marriage with the daughter of John Wentworth offers. Not to be ignored even if her debut is two seasons cold."

HER mother was desperately eager for her to marry. Well, in this respect she was not so very different from most of the other mothers, Jill thought. All of them were anxious to weep at daughters' weddings, and give the bridegroom a grateful peck on the cheek as he took them away.

Well, at least, she would compromise regarding the ball, and be paraded once more.

And then came an electric, daring thought. She would send an invitation to Alan. Patly would learn his address. From Ardash Holm, if necessary.

Jill felt almost lighthearted as she played with the happy idea, which was entirely within the realm of possibilities.

"I can't understand your sudden enthusiasm for the party," Mrs. Wentworth said, fixing Jill with a speculative eye. "Is there some special reason?"

"Nothing special," Jill's voice sang, as she prevaricated bravely. She added, a little anxiously, "Sometimes I think maybe we shouldn't have such a large party, mother. Haven't you noticed that father has been looking worried lately?"

"Nonsense," Mrs. Wentworth's voice was sharp. "What could he possibly have to worry about? Most men love worried. It's a way they have of impressing their wives with their importance. Every husband thinks of himself as an Atlas going around with the world on his shoulders. You never see any of them cutting out parties they want to give because of the expense."

Just the same, Jill resolved, I'll sound father out. All her romancing of the moment before seemed childish and absurd now. If father didn't want the party, they wouldn't have one.

If he did, she would send Alan an invitation.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Hallowe'en Haunts America Too Long

We used to have Hallowe'en one night a year. Now we have it all month. The minute the smell of burning leaves cuts the air, it does something to spirits, and out pour the youngsters from every house in town. Every corner has its gangs, every shadow its whisperers, every garbage can has a fatalistic look, awaiting its doom.

Now let us get away from words and down to the business of the matter. I move that there is too much Hallowe'en. Who seconds the motion?

Remarks? Here they are. Since the war, I think that is about the right date, America has staked its holidays in too-big bites. Easter used to be Easter, and the Fourth used to be the Fourth. Christmas is another story. But today we begin every holiday a full month ahead. The stores are full of goods for the oncoming celebration a full month or six weeks before time.

There is no real relish for any occasion when children have been stuffing on Easter eggs for a month, or lighting sparkles for weeks. By such tactics we are taking the edge off enjoyment.

However, these are innocent enough things, as far as people are concerned. They do not annoy us or make it a hazard to leave the porch swing outside. They cloy, but do not disturb us at our evening paper. They are not nuisances that make us hate October, the loveliest month of the year.

The good burgher does not care if he is selected on Corn night, or Hallowe'en night, as a target for fun. He remembers his own boyhood, when the postern gate was left on its hinges at your own peril. He will permit his doors to be tied from without, and still not swear too loudly. He'll stand for lots of things. But when it comes to his whole month being ruined, he gets mad. And he has a perfect right to be mad.

Keep your children in at night. Of course, John Burgher must keep his boy in, too. Maybe he won't mind his doorbell ringing once while he is playing a tough robber, but ten times is just too much. And Mrs. Burgher is perfectly justified in reporting to the police when she finds rubbish on her porch day after day for weeks, when she goes out at dawn for her milk bottles.

If the children simply cannot contain themselves, and must be doing something these frosty nights when witches ride, let them dress up at home and pull taffy. Have the crowd in, but keep them off the street. Two nights are enough, ven one. Then pinks and high jinks are in order and we accept the hazard. But impress this on their minds. It is as unlawful to work real destruction on Hallowe'en as at any other time. And, oh, for the first of November!

By GROVER JONES
HOLLYWOOD.—Printing isn't just a hobby with me. I had to take up an avocation to keep from going nuts. Writing scenarios is a swell business, but next to being the target of a knife thrower in a side show, it's the most trying job in the world.

There's no rest for a scribbler of screen plays. He works all day writing reams of literary goulash and then tosses all night, wondering if the thing is going to be a bust. If he is at all like myself, he develops into what is known as a wind bag. Talk—talk—talk. Every minute of the hour, every hour of the day. Not content with pounding pedantic verbiage into the weary ears of producer and director, he flies home at night and repeats the stories of the day to the wife.

I suppose my wife got tired of it. Anyway, she conceived the idea of getting me something to occupy my mind. Printing appealed to her because I had once been a sign painter and she knew I was vastly interested in lettering. So she bought a "snapper" press, several cases of type, and fixed me up a small print shop in a corner room of the house.

The stuff was fascinating. Night after night I'd sit at the type case and set up advertisements for imaginary grocery and department stores. As I began to learn more about the art of printing, I realized that my choice of type was limited, so the old print shop started to expand.

Hobby Becomes Business
Eventually, I built a shop of my own in the back yard and installed a brand-new type-setting machine. This was immediately followed by a small, high-speed press. My type cases grew in number until I had practically every modern type face in existence. Instead of playing around pulling proof on ads of imaginary merchants, I got out a monthly magazine for a club, of which I was a member. This went on

High Prices Help to State Apple Growers

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Arkansas apple growers will be approximately $95,000 richer through higher prices and increased sales resulting from this year's campaign to promote consumption of the crop, an extension committee in charge of the drive reported Monday.

Mrs. Esther G. Kramer, chairman of the group, predicted publicity given the campaign would aid in the disposition of future crops.

The report was made to a conference of extension workers here. W. J. Jernigan, state 4-H club agent, said 100,000 members was the farm organization's goal for 1942.

All advertisements, with certain exceptions, in the daily newspapers and magazines of Lima, Peru, will be subject to an ad valorem tax of 10 per cent under a law recently enacted.

for two years and gave me no end of happiness and relaxation.

Then the hobby graduated into a real business. I started printing a magazine about the people I knew best—the movie folk. Today I print thousands of copies. My equipment has been augmented by a big press. My crew consists of an art director, an associate editor, three printers, a proofreader, and two advertising men.

The shop in my back yard became too small and I moved into the business section of Pacific Boulevard. Downstairs are the composing and press rooms; upstairs I have five offices for the art, editorial and advertising staff.

No Pay Required
It's an expensive hobby when considered in dollars and cents, but it's more than repaid me in the joy I get. Some people, of course, think I'm completely nuts—and maybe they're right.

But then I know a former star who spent nearly half a million dollars on a doll house; another is cracked on the subject of growing trees; and quite a few of my associates have to feed their hobbies. In the latter case there is the grave danger of the hobby dying or finishing last.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Epic of Boer Trek in Darkest Africa.

Francis Bret Young has long since achieved notable triumph in the novel, but none so great as that in his latest, "They Seek a Country" (Reynolds and Hitecock: $2.75). Epic recounting of the founding of a nation in the wilds of Africa, this book is assuredly one of the most sweeping, brilliant novels of the year.

The story of the Boers of South Africa is a drama sharply paralleling that of our own frontier times. Here was a people economically oppressed, contemptuous of an arrogant English rule. So they walked out, literally. They staged one of the greatest trials in history—wholesale migration to a new land.

And Mr. Young has made the most of it. The vivid action shifts from an English courtroom to a convict ship, thence into a wilderness. Avildly you follow the fortunes of the Boer families caught in the sweep of the trek.

All this, of course, is set against the background of the rich, but savage, unnamed Africa. One of the great dramatic notes of the book is the Blauwkrans massacre. Certainly no Indian depredation in our own rugged pioneer era was more ruthless.

Mr. Young spent 20 years in study and first-hand observation of South Africa. And since the World war he has visited it several times. The result is an authoritative story, passionately drawn. "This passionate soil," Mr. Young calls this verdant country. He has caught the strength of it in this novel.—P. G. F.

Go to a Tree
When you grow weary of the boasts of men,
Go to a tree, my friend—one that has stood
Long, patient years within a silent wood.
Beneath its branches you will find again
A thing long lost. Trees are content to be
As God created them. No bough that turns
Its golden thoughts to Autumn ever years
Beyond a hillside's immortality.
Go to a tree in silence. You will find
In the soft eloquence of leaf and leaf
Serenity beyond the voice of grief,
And faith above the reach of human-kind.
Man spends his noisy days in search of gain,
While trees find God in sunlight, soil and rain.—Selected.

Modern Medicine Nails a Leg Together

Nailing a broken hip bone together is surgery's latest method in speeding mending of a fracture of the "femoral neck," as demonstrated above at the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons at Chicago. When the plumb-bob, by the nurse's hand, shows the bones in alignment, the surgeon drives a vitalium nail through an incision in the flesh. It is driven into the upper shaft of the thigh bone and the head of the femur, in the hip socket, nailing the broken pieces together. The non-corrosive nail remains in the patient for life.

Clemency Order Issued by Governor in Two Other Cases

Two other persons in Pulaski and Logan counties were relieved from payment of fines through clemency orders.

Groucho and Chico Fined $1,000 Each

Convicted for Infringing Upon Copyright—Case Is Appealed

LOS ANGELES.—(AP)—Groucho Marx and Chico Marx, the comedians, were fined $1000 each in federal court Monday on their conviction of infringing a copyright.

Their attorney gave oral notice of appeal. They were convicted by a jury Saturday of using on a radio broadcast certain "gag" material which Carroll and Garrett Graham submitted to them previously and which they had rejected.

The Marx brothers contended that the late Al Bonser, screen writer, prepared the script they used in the broadcast. They declared they did not recall the substance of the skit, "Mr. Dibble and Mr. Dabble," submitted by the Grahams, and did not realize their broadcast script was similar.

Groucho issued a prepared statement, signed by himself and his brother, in which they declared that "after 28 years of honest endeavor . . . we are faced with the indignity of being convicted of a misdemeanor. . . . "We know that we are innocent. . . . While it is true the offense charged is only a misdemeanor . . . we are compelled by the utter unfairness of the whole proceeding to demand that the matter be submitted to a higher court."

as the actual rule of conduct among Governments, and by the maintenance of justice and a scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized peoples with one another.

There followed 26 articles providing for membership, representation, arbitration of disputes, guarantees against external aggression, reduction of armaments, mandates over "backward territories and races," international cooperation and the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice.

The league has two stated aims: 1. To preserve peace and to seek a settlement of international disputes. 2. To organize in the most varied spheres the cooperation of peoples with a view to the moral and material welfare of humanity.

The League has done a tremendous amount of spade work in the humanitarian and allied economic fields, holding international conferences on finance and transit, health, armaments, intellectual cooperation, the white slave traffic and the illicit opium trade. In many of these, and in the work of the International Labor Organization, a League subsidiary, the part, paying its own way.

The League has a representative assembly which meets once a year; a permanent council meeting every third month, and a permanent secretariat.

Members Put Up Gold
Members of the League pay an annual contribution in gold francs. Great Britain, for 1937, paid 2,490,531 gold francs. The Dominions added to this total. France paid 1,841,838 gold francs. Afghanistan paid only 23,060 gold francs.

The franc has a current exchange value of $2.67 cents, being based on the Swiss gold franc before devaluation.

It is in the international political arena that the League's works have been scrutinized most closely, applauded most and condemned most severely. Its detractors early charged it was a tool for the maintenance of the status quo in Europe after the World war.

Its apologists, first reading the roll of its good deeds, shake heads over the fact that the world's leading power the United States, has chosen to remain aloof.

Hamilton Trust Pays Dividend

22nd Consecutive Quarterly Payment Made to Depositors

In the quarterly report for the period ending October 31, E. A. Jones, president of the Hamilton Depositors corporation, announces the distribution of 2.01 cents per Hamilton Trust share payable to shareholders of record September 30, 1937. The current distribution represents the twenty-second consecutive quarterly payment into the Hamilton trust fund.

Summing up the year's business through the current period, the report discloses that dividends amounting to 8.94 cents per Hamilton Trust share have been distributed during 1937—a gain of 46 per cent over 1936. For the quarter ending October 31, 1937, the dividend was the largest in the history of the trust fund, excepting only the disbursement of last January when numerous extra distributions were added over the close of the year.

The report calls attention to general improvement among 19 of the 30 corporations underlying the trust fund where quarterly statements of earnings have been issued. It is estimated that earnings for the first half of 1937 will exceed those for the same period of 1936 by approximately 40 per cent.

The face value of Hamilton certificates written as of September 30, 1937, totaled $9,096,731.96, compared to $5,254,468.66 on the same date last year—an increase of more than 70 per cent.

Not so long ago, people depended upon tales of returned travelers for their information about distant lands. Even when true, these tales were frequently misunderstood and misquoted. Often they were tall tales to begin with . . . There was no way to check up on these stories, no agency devoted to the accurate reporting of what really happened around the world.

Today journalism of integrity is an authoritative source on which to base stories, judgments and opinions. Furthermore, the published story can be referred to and reread in its unchangeable form.

Such journalism requires great care in its compilation, for it must withstand the strong light of publication.

During a half century of development The Associated Press has adhered closely to an ideal of journalistic integrity. That is the reason why newspapers of today can bring to their readers truthful and unbiased reports of what is happening all over the world.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Careful lighting, low and to one side, gives this "character portrait" its unusual freilicht effect.

HAVE you ever tried shooting away a whole roll of film on one subject, not changing its position in the least but merely altering the way the light strikes it?

It may seem foolish and extravagant but it can be one of the most important photographic lessons you ever took.

Try it on this theory: that the objects in a picture have no real interest in themselves but that all the interest is in the way they are lighted—how the light strikes, how shadows are cast. Or, in the words of a great French photographer, that the subject is nothing, the lighting is everything.

Take a photo flood lamp in a reflector and arrange a number of small objects—say some fruit spilling from a bowl—on a white table top. Have enough general room light to give detail in the shadows.

Now set up your camera firmly with the light right beside it, for your first picture. Take another with the light far to the left and high up. Take one with the light directly over the subject. Take one with it behind the subject, shading the bulb so that no direct light shines into the camera lens.

Try as many positions as the length of the film roll allows. When the pictures are developed and printed, the differences will astound you. Study them and you will learn what can be done with light when it is properly used.

If you don't like still life, try a series of portraits, using the same person and the same pose but different angles of lighting. From picture to picture, facial expression will vary astonishingly—dead with flat front light, slither with the light low and directly in front, startled or even terrified with the light low and to one side, and so on.

The same is true of landscapes. With each hour of the day they change, the deep morning shadows dwindling into noon and growing again into the grandeur of evening.

Light is the photographer's working material, the plastic clay from which he models his pictures. Study it. Learn what lighting can do and apply your knowledge and you will produce pictures of which you will be proud.

STORIES IN STAMPS

ISSUED STAMPS TO SYMBOLIZE WAR.

PEACE has dominated the foreign policy of the Soviets, practically since the beginning of this Communist state. They wish to avoid war chiefly because war would defer, perhaps wreck the realization of the socialization dream.

At the same time, the Soviets have feverishly plunged into the business of building a vast military machine such as the world has never before known. It boasts the ultra-modern in artillery and the swiftest in aircraft. So war-conscious have the Soviets become that mass parachute jumps are today a national pastime.

Yet Russia deplores war and has suffered repeated insults from Japan to avoid war. To maintain peace they have been willing to yield their control of Northern Manchuria. They acceded to the Kellogg-Briand pact. And they took another step, unique among nations. Russia issued a set of stamps to symbolize the horrors of modern warfare. Two of these, depicting the bombing of a modern city and war destroying civilization, are shown here. They were issued in 1934. (Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

With 70,000 fans packing the stadium for the Rose Bowl game of 1929, California opened a first quarter attack that was checked by Georgia Tech on the southerners' 25-yard line. Tech fumbled and Riegels, California center and captain-elect, scooped up the ball and started to run. Suddenly he about-faced and headed for his own goal.

The roar of the crowd drowned the yells of his teammates as he dashed on to the 6-inch line where he was tackled by Benny Lom, California left half. Lom's punt from behind the goal was blocked, giving Tech two points on a safety that provided the margin of victory in Tech's 8-7 victory.

Benton Is Boomed as All-American

Arkansas Star Is Major Contender for Mythical Team

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—The Fayetteville football machine—big Jim Benton—stood right in front of the Southwest Conference pack Monday as an All-American candidate.

Benton, who tucked two of Jack Robbins' forward passes under his arm and trotted for touchdowns against Texas A. and M. Saturday, is the circuit's leading scorer now with 30 points to his credit.

Many of those who watched his electrifying performance were convinced that he was more than just a candidate for the nation's annual roster of gridiron greats. You could get plenty of positive assurance around the circuit Monday that the senior end would have to be considered most seriously when the final selections are made next month.

Benton was on the All-Southwest team last fall and his play during the past four games has been all that any football expert could desire. Proof of his superiority is simply the fact that when Benton goes out for a possible pass, the defending team always sends two men to guard him.

The Parker wingman, unanimous selection for the all-state high school team when he finished at Fayetteville in 1933, doesn't let that double-guarding bother him. On one of the passes he scored with Saturday, Benton waited far to the left for a heave. The two Aggie backs were on him, waiting Robbins threw the pass hard and high—about nine or ten feet up. Benton simply leaped up between the defenders, cradled the ball and turning in midair landed perfectly poised about a yard or two behind them. He streaked to the goal without a hand being laid on him. The other touchdown pass was taken over his shoulder as he sprinted straight to the end zone, inches ahead of three Aggie defenders.

In addition to his great pass receiving, Benton is outstanding on defense. Time after time he came clear around behind the Aggies line to smear plays from the rear. He gets down under punts fast and is a deadly tackler. His blocking is excellent.

Arkansas goes to Houston Saturday to close its conference schedule against the Rice Institute Owls. Rice is tied with Baylor for first place and if the Parkers win through Benton's work, as they did over A. and M., the Fayetteville boy will be hard to count out on the final balloting for national honors.

State Welfare Head Dies at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—A series of heart attacks brought death Monday to Dr. Robert A. Milliken, director of the crippled children's division of the state welfare department. He was 46 years of age.

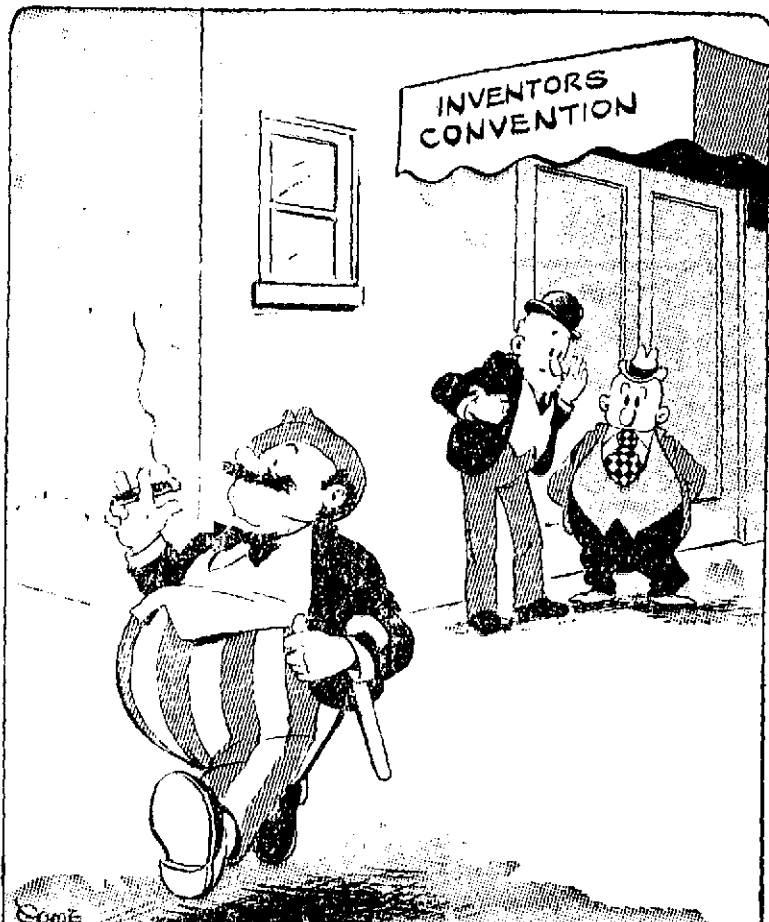

A native of Indianapolis, Ind., where he practiced several years, Dr. Milliken moved to Little Rock in 1934 and took up the crippled children's work on July 1, under appointment of Governor Bailey.

The orthopedic surgeon was graduated from Groton College in 1909, Princeton University in 1914 and Harvard University medical school in 1918. He later did post-graduate work at Harvard.

Surviving are his widow, a son and daughter, his father, Walter L. Milliken of Finchurst, N. C., and a brother and two sisters.

Governor Is Asked Commute Sentence

Clemency Urged for Two Life Termers—Is Board Recommendation

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The state penitentiary board recommended Monday that Governor Carl E. Bailey commute the life terms of two men convicted of criminal assault, the commutation to make both eligible for parole immediately.

The board asked that the sentence of Brent Coats, Saline county, be cut to 21 years and that of Toy Dunn, Jackson county, to 15 years.

Coats, then only 17, was convicted of attacking a 16-year-old girl near Bauxite in 1923. Letters in the governor's files said feeling ran so high that Coats was removed to the penitentiary walls immediately after his arrest. He previously had served a three-year term in the reform school on a similar charge.

Parole Officer C. A. Grier said Circuit Judge H. B. Means had no objection and that Prosecuting Attorney W. H. Glover and Sheriff V. A. Rucker recommended the commutation. Coats escaped from Tucker farm July 23, 1932, but was recaptured the following day.

Dunn, 29, and his brother Roy, were convicted of assaulting a woman near Swifton in 1932. His record showed he had received six furloughs in the past five years.

A commutation from 21 to nine years was asked for Jack Lawrence, 25, found guilty of second degree murder three years ago in Craighead county. Grier said he killed Carlos Lewis at a dance near Lake City.

The board recommended paroles for 21 men convicted, furloughs for two men, paroles for 42 inmates of the boys industrial school, and parole for four women and seven from the negro boys industrial school.

Included in the convicts for whom paroles were asked were Jimmie Lee Allison, Union county, burglary and grand larceny, four years; Ernest Davis, Miller, grand larceny, three

Former Student Is Cleared of Killing

William Campbell, 23, Is Acquitted of J. A. McCaw Death

HELENA—A jury in Circuit Court here Monday afternoon freed William Campbell, 23, former Arkansas College student, of the slaying June 9, 1936, at Jexa, of J. A. McCaw on the ground that he acted to save the life of his father, Dr. J. A. Campbell. The jury deliberated only five minutes.

Dr. Campbell testified that McCaw had drawn a pistol to shoot him when his son opened fire with two .32 caliber pistols.

Dr. Williams Ellis said that he examined the body of the slain man at the hospital and that there were eight bullet holes in the side and right arm. He said that any one of seven would have caused death.

No reference was made in the testimony to the accidental shooting of a negro who was killed, officers said, by stray bullets from young Campbell's guns.

The young man, who returned from college several weeks before the fatal shooting to assist his father in operating the farm, did not testify.

Following the slaying he came to Helena and surrounded by Deputy Sheriff Edgar Hickey. He has been at liberty on bond.

Pigskin Parade Is Led by California

Arkansas Is Rated 16th Strongest Team in the Nation

NEW YORK—(AP)—For the third successive week and without anything approaching serious debate California occupies the national pigskin peak.

While Minnesota dropped out of the "first ten" for the first time in four years, and a quartet of championship contenders bowed their way to higher brackets, California piled up another landslide margin in the Associated Press national-wide poll of newspaper experts.

The Bears were the No. 1 choice of 49 out of 62 writers, and topped the list with 69 points out of a possible 620. At the same time Alabama, Baylor, Fordham and Nebraska rode to higher ratings for the week on the crest of a fresh wave of votes.

Here's the latest tabulation, scoring each team on a 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 basis.

Checks Are Mailed to World Champion Yanks

NEW YORK—(AP)—Twenty-six members of the world champion New York Yankees baseball club, including Manager Joe McCarthy, the coaches and Trainer Erle (Doc) Painter, have been mailed checks for $4,411.11 each as a result of their World Series victory over the Giants, the office of Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis announced Monday.

In addition to the 26 full shares, a dozen lesser awards were made to make up the total players' share of the receipts, $193,044.33.

The Giants divided a pool of $128,096.22 into 27 full shares of $4,489.95 each, plus nine fractional awards.

The total players' pool, including 60 per cent of the receipts of the first four games, after 15 per cent had been deducted for the commissioner's share, and a proportionate amount of the $100,000 radio broadcasting receipts was $459,629.35.

The Detroit Tigers and Chicago Cubs, second in the two leagues, divided $34,472.20 each among their players. The third-place Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates split $22,981.47 each and the fourth place Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Cardinals divided $11,490.74 apiece.

That meant $1,188.70 to each Tiger who was voted a full share. Joe McCarthy, who also took the losers' end in the Chicago city series, drew down $1,276.75 apiece from the World Series and $393.49 from the city series. Total $1,670.24 each. The Sox share totaled $1,302.25 each, full share amounted to $527.71 from the World Series and $349.54 from the city series.

Full shares for the other clubs were $810.06 for the Pirates, $412.88 for the Cardinals and $443.63 for the Indians.

Texarkana Man Is Beaten to Death

Frank Gibbons, 58, Dies After Fight at Night Club

TEXARKANA, Ark.—Frank Gibbons, 58-year-old prominent Texarkana stock trader, was beaten to death in a fist fight at the Monterey club, three miles west of Texarkana on the Seventh street highway shortly after 8 p. m. Monday.

Gibbons' jaw was battered by a terrific blow that knocked out several teeth. He died in his room at the Stockmen's hotel where companions took him after the battle.

Unable to get a physician immediately, hotel attendants called an East ambulance that took him to Michael Mesher hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Sheriff Henry Brooks of Bowie county sped to the night club and there arrested Tommy Adams, 23-year-old ex-sailor on the United States destroyer, West Virginia, who he said would be charged with Gibbons' death.

Adams, when taken into custody, first told the sheriff he was Tommy Johnston. He resides at 807 Olive street.

From the East Funeral Home Gibbons' body was taken to Texarkana hospital on orders of Sheriff Henry Brooks for X-ray pictures. It was at first believed that his neck was broken.

A physician who examined the stockman and viewed the X-ray pictures said that Gibbons died of a concussion caused by the sudden forceful blow, that apparently was unexpected by the stock trader.

Ervin Clark, one of Gibbons' companions pointed out Adams as the man who struck the fatal blow. The former sailor admitted he had fought with Clark but denied striking Gibbons.

Hada Jabbering

IRS words and the nursery at Callender echoes to their soft-voiced conversation from sun up to sun down.

Incidentally, they have very low contralto voices. All of this is revealed in a paper on the quintuplets' language development, written by W. E. Blatz, M. I. Fletcher and M. Mason of St. George's School for Child Study of the University of Toronto. The study was one of several made of the quintuplets by Dr. Blatz and his co-workers.

Psychologists have shown that single children learn to talk before twins do. The child who grows up in company with another child of his own age can communicate with his playmate through grunts and gestures. The child grows up without such a companion, however, has to learn to talk to make his wants known.

If this is true of twins, how much more would it be true of quintuplets! Each of these girls has four playmates, instead of just one at the same stage. From the time they first crawled around the nursery together, the quints had a code of gestures, squeals and jabberings by which they could understand each other. They should worry about language!

No Wonder They Were Slow There is another, similar factor. Dr. Blatz has found at the nursery school that children whose parents do everything for them are slower in learning to talk than children who are not so pampered.

There again you have the case of a child who doesn't need to learn to talk, because his wants are anticipated before he needs to call attention to them. And there you have another parallel—the quintuplets, who have always had trained nurses in constant attendance, looking out for them and hurrying to meet their needs as no mother, however devoted, could hope to do.

Those things considered, it is no wonder that the quints were slow in learning to talk. Having started, however, they are making up for lost time. At present they are acquiring new words faster than the normal child acquires them. The psychologists who have been studying them during the last two years will testify that the girls will talk your arm off, if you give them a chance.

One of the biggest difficulties the nursery authorities have had in maintaining meal-time discipline has been due to the fact that the quints like to carry on earnest and interminable conversations over the dinner table.

They were born pantomimists, apparently—which made it easier for them to get along without words in the early days. This lends spice to their conversation now, for the gestures and the pantomime are still used as much as ever.

It's Done With Gestures If a quint wants to say "No," she doesn't merely say "No." (Of course, with the quints, it's "Non," anyway, since they talk French). She shakes her head vigorously, letting her curls fly, and says "Non! Non!" with great impressiveness. And when the answer is yes, her "Quil!" is bit off short, accompanied by an emphatic nodding of the head and an extra wide opening of the eyes.

The quints know their names, too, although they can't pronounce them very well. Go up to Annette, for instance, and call her Marie and you will get an instant and voluble reaction.

"Non! Non!" (With much head-shaking.) "Marie la"—pointing. "Moi Annette!"

All of the girls can say "Yvonne" without trouble. They have a way of turning R into W, which makes Marie, "Mawie." Annette becomes "Nan-nette," and Cecile becomes "Tee-teele." And Emilie is "Meelie."

The benevolent Quilt of Dr. Allan Roy Dafe, the quints' physician, protector and best friend, falls across their early language experiences as it does across everything else connected with them. Here is a sample:

The ordinary child, learning to talk in English, acquires these words first—Mama, Dada, Papa and Baby. The quints, starting out in French, got these words first—Papa, Maman, Tonton (for Auntie), the nursery cook (their aunt) tit-tot, (for tick-tock, clock) and docteur. Only they don't quite say Docteur; it's more like "Dotteur."

Annette and Yvonne led the way in talking, especially Annette. Twelve times she started using a word a month before the others could pick it up. Yvonne, on the other hand, has 24 words in her vocabulary that no other quints possess. Annette has 17, Marie 16, Emilie 15 and Cecile 10.

Different in French The study of the girls' progress in spoken language has been extremely interesting to these learned psychologists. For instance, psychologists have pretty definitely tabulated the order in which English-speaking children learn to pronounce the vowel sounds. But the order in which the quints mastered these sounds was entirely different.

The quints are learning French, rather than English, and the vowel sounds are different in French.

But the quints developed their control over consonants in the same order that English-speaking children do. Consonants are much the same in all languages—which indicates, possible, that a child develops consonants in the order of their difficulty, not in the order of their use.

Another, along the same line: like all children, the quints were mouthing single syllable, most of them meaningless to anybody but a quintuplet, long before they were putting them together into words. And their increase

Greater Flow Is Shown at McKean

Oil Well Near Buckner Reported Making 540 Barrels Daily

MAGNOLIA, Ark. — (Special) — Standard Oil company's McKean No. 1 near Buckner, was flowing Monday at the rate of 540 barrels daily after operators opened the test following coring 39 feet deeper into the saturated lime formation.

The well was still cleaning itself. Whether operators will allow the well to flow at its present rate of production or attempt to core deeper in the hopes of making more oil remained to be seen.

In the mastery of syllables began about 10 months before they stepped up their increase in the use of words. This, to Dr. Blatz, suggests that the mere joining together of syllables is not the mechanism by which words are formed. Meanings must be added. The child can talk before he has anything to say.

The quints are going to be bilingual. From now on, the conversation at one meal each day is to be in English, as fast as the quints can acquire any.

Which, judging by the speed with which they are picking up their French, won't be long now.

NEXT: How the quintuplets differ in social development.

When Browning was asked what his "Sordello" meant, he is said to have replied: "When I wrote it, God and Browning knew; now only God knows."

Venable Announces for Caraway's Seat

Is First Candidate to File for Office in 1938 Elections

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—War veteran J. Rosser Venable became Tuesday Arkansas' first announced candidate for an office to be filled in the 1938 elections.

He formally entered the race for the U. S. senate seat now held by Hattie W. Caraway. She has not announced her 1938 plans, but is expected to seek re-election.

The 48-year-old Venable unsuccessfully opposed the late Joe T. Robinson for the senate in the 1936 Democratic primary. He has never held a public office.

"I am not running against any one," said Venable's announcement, "but running for the office for two reasons: First, I want the office, and second, the office needs me."

"I am for balancing the budget and pruning the political appendages that the American people desire removed from the tax burdens."

"I am against packing the supreme court, nor do I favor the economic and political control of the American people by 15 states through the wage and hour bill."

Mrs. Grayson Quits Secretary's Office

Arkadelphia Woman in No Statement After Her Action

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Thirty-six hours after reports listing her as a possible candidate for secretary of state in 1938, Mrs. Mary C. Grayson of Arkadelphia resigned Monday as deputy secretary of state, effective immediately.

Both Secretary of State C. G. Hall and Mrs. Grayson said they had no statements. Hall said the deputy gave no reason for resigning.

Mrs. Grayson described as "unfounded" the reports that she might run against Hall next year. Asked if the news articles had influenced her decision to resign, she reiterated "I have absolutely no statement to make."

The Arkadelphia political leader has been working in Hall's office since January at a salary of $125 monthly. She said she had not decided whether she would return to her home city or remain here.

Mentioned last year as a candidate for secretary of state, Mrs. Grayson announced several days before the primary that she had decided not to run. She supported Hall against George W. Neal.

Mrs. Grayson was one of the three members of the Democratic state committee who urged the calling of a primary to fill the Joe T. Robinson senate seat last July. The committee instead nominated Governor Carl E. Bailey over the "no" voters of the three.

Biblical Pictures at First Baptist

Lecture by Rev. W. R. Hamilton at Service Wednesday Night

The Rev. W. R. Hamilton will give an illustrated lecture on biblical geography at the midweek service of First Baptist church Wednesday night.

The Wednesday night lecture, one of a series which will be continued at successive midweek services, will carry the audience to Damascus the oldest existing city in the world. Views will be shown of "The Street Called Straight," the house on the wall like the one from which Paul escaped the city, the ruins caused by bombardment of French cannon. (An Associated Press dispatch in the Hope Star told of a flood which took the lives of a thousand people in Damascus last week).

Then the tour continues to the ancient ruins of Baalbek, a Graeco-Roman city of old Syria. Mr. Hamilton will exhibit several curios from the places pictured on the screen.

Visitors are welcomed to these illustrated lectures and large crowds are attending. The midweek service will be held at 7:45 in the adult assembly room in the Educational building.

Views will be shown of "The Street Called Straight," the house on the wall like the one from which Paul escaped the city, the ruins caused by bombardment of French cannon. (An Associated Press dispatch in the Hope Star told of a flood which took the lives of a thousand people in Damascus last week).

Then the tour continues to the ancient ruins of Baalbek, a Graeco-Roman city of old Syria. Mr. Hamilton will exhibit several curios from the places pictured on the screen.

Visitors are welcomed to these illustrated lectures and large crowds are attending. The midweek service will be held at 7:45 in the adult assembly room in the Educational building.
